Biography:

Michael Bays has over 30 years of experience in technology development and research, including definition and measurement of quality; and management of global multi-cultural teams. Michael received his Bachelor's degree in Computer Science from the University of California, Santa Cruz. Throughout his career, he has tackled some of the most troublesome elements of large-scale research and development, including moving teams away from the procedure process and towards self-aware/self-managed teams. Beyond just the technology application, its how people come together and work together effectively that can define the success or failure of even simple tasks. Michael brings a unique ability to form, motivate, and coach teams to find their own unique identity and thrive on the challenges of change and success.

A long-time resident of Southern California, Michael, chose Temecula as the place to live and raise a family. He feels that Temecula represents the best California has to offer with a diverse population and city that makes amazing progress in even the most difficult of times. Michael began contributing to the city of Temecula as a city commissioner in 2020.

As a commissioner in the Old Town Local Review Board, Michael works to ensure that the continued development and maintenance of this important element of Temecula remains true to the intent and spirit of its plan. Michael regularly engages with businesses operating in Old Town and Temecula citizens to understand what is important to them and how well the city is delivering against their expectations.
